Download the E-book

Finally here is the book for a weekend read. Being regular readers of the blog, I am afraid, you will be disappointed with the book. In fact there is nothing new in it as I have already shared everything through the blog. Anyway please go through it and let me know your feedback. I am more interested to know the negatives than the positives so that I can focus on the negatives next time.

I have already written more than 130 articles in the blog for the last two years. I am monitoring the incoming traffic to the blog regularly and I have more than 250 regular followers. I am very sad to learn that I am not getting any hits through social networks like Twitter, Facebook and Google+. This shows that the readers of this blog never cared to share any of these posts through their social networks.

I request you to help me reach out. Please do share the book and promo video. Just click on the buttons below the posts to share it through your Twitter, Facebook and Google+. While sharing on Facebook, select the right thumbnail. Thank You.

Sir,

Thank you so much for this book. We can get all the relevant points about your strategy, mentioned in various posts of yours in one place, thanks to this Book. It will be really useful for newbies like me and those willing to jump into Day Trading.

I have shared it in Facebook also.

Dear ST,
Thank you very much. I was eagerly waiting for this e-book. I am new to this blog (2 weeks) and your way of trading very much suits to my personality as I am a big fan of YTC. I used to tell my family and friends that my "guru" is there in another continent. Now I got a new "guru" who trades the same instrument that I trade and also there in the same country and state. And now a great book to refer all together.

Thanks ST for such a broad mind and courage that you are showing.

Regards,
ST

Dear ST,
I have read your book in a single stretch. Its written as simple and compact manner. Anyone who has some basic TA knowledge can easily understand it. Good Work. Only thing I struggled to understand is "WRB" in fig 14. Later I figured it out as wide range bar.

Today is a good day for me as I managed to end my trading day with a very small profit (started day trading 2 weeks back) and also got a very valuable book.

Sir,

many thanks for your ebook which I am reading right now. in the book you had mentioned about using 3 minutes timeframe. I was wondering instead of 3 minutes timeframe, if we use 750 R-range in ticks or 500 R-range in ticks, then each candle will have a brick size of 7.5 (750R) or 5 points(500 R) which will not be related to time at all just purely price. From this we can also know the time duration the price had been within the range.(this plotting is possible in amibroker). pls check this aspect and comment on it. many many thanks

Villa,

I tried Renko charts early with 100 atr in 5min time frame which will have a brick size of around 5 nifty points but the delay in terms of renkos 3 candle formation at a stretch made signals delayed and one of the best chartist worked on renko and now not using it.

please validate

Dear All

Thank you very much for the overwhelming response. More than 250 downloads so far.

But I have not received many constructive criticisms from your side.

"Sid" pointed out that the concept of MSP is missing and he is right. The topic "Thanks" should have been at the beginning rather than at the end of the book. Point noted and will be corrected next time

Some of the short forms have been used without giving the expansions. Dinil was wondering what this WRB is all about.

Noted villa's suggestion of range charts. We will explore it.

This time I am getting a lot of hits through social networks. Many have shared through twitter and Facebook. Thanks a lot

Many readers have shared the link through their blogs. Thanks to them

Thanks a lot for those who shared through popular forums.

I believe I could encourage you to look at the market from a different angle through the book.

I assure you that "Nifty Nirvana" will strive to deliver incredible value to the readers.

Hello Rajesh,

first at all: good job. Very clear and you always catches the point.

But I've got some criticisms, maybe..

At Figure 9 you mentioned a short before the down breakout with enough space to the previous day low but this is also the bottom of the previous range, so how can I expect a breakthrough? This breakthrough area is the next decision point/zone and one page before you mentioned exactly the opposite, so the better entry is the BOF before of the Previous day high. But maybe this picture was only taken to demonstrate the aspect of space. The same appears at Figure 17 but maybe you handle a pressure play different but here again you a buying at the previous range high.

What I missed was your SniperShot-Concept, it really fits bying low sell high-sell high buy low and the space between 2 decision points for maybe the target for the 1st lot.

There was so much positive feedback for you and you ask for criticism that I hope you don't get me wrong. I love your blog and still following your trades and ideas. Keep going.

Thanks for the comment. I always welcome criticisms as I am getting an opportunity to elaborate and clarify my points. While posting charts, I have not thought about all the aspects. It was just to illustrate a particular point. Page 8 Para 1. My preferred method is buying lows and selling highs. The concept of Pressure Plays was introduced as an exception as I felt missing many low risk opportunities are not right. Page 40.

Sniper Shots were introduced as a tactic to reduce the risk of Breakout trades. I did not include it in the book because I felt nobody is interested in it.

I have received not even a single comment for the post titled "Sniper Shots". Then I posted in a forum with two lakh members.

<http://www.traderji.com/technical-analysis/90412-sniper-shots.html>

No body is interested in the concept it seems. So I stopped writing about it.

Please do visit and post your comments. Thanks

Will let you know if anymore suggestions in future.
